APRIL 2020
Combining cheese and techno music might seem like complete opposites, but to Nicolas Lecuq and Diane Sauvage, that is just a typical night at home. While both are from France, they first met at a convention in San Francisco. At the time they were both working for cheese companies and while they were technically competitors, they would travel on the road together to visit customers.

“For years all of our customers would say ‘You two will end up together’ which we always laughed off,” said Diane. “After being great friends for over three years, we decided to start dating and have been together ever since.”

Their relationship started off living together in New York City, and for awhile Nicolas changed careers, operating the popular restaurant Le Moulin à Café. “Life had become busy having two children and getting married,” said Nicolas. “Running a restaurant didn’t offer the lifestyle hours I wanted to also be a family man. I was offered a position with Saputo Cheese, but in order for my career to grow, it meant we would have to move to Wisconsin.”

While at first Diane, being a self-proclaimed ‘city girl’ had visions of sheep and cows in their backyard, she was pleasantly surprised when they came to look at houses. “I quickly realized how charming yet city-like Whitefish Bay is and we absolutely love it here,” said Diane. “It feels very European in how the community comes together. When we first moved in, neighbors would come over with bread or a pie to welcome us and invite us over for a bbq or wine night. In New York, those type of things don’t happen and you don’t know your neighbors at all. Here the norm is to have dinner at home with friends, both as couples and even family dinners. In New York the norm is to always go out to eat at a restaurant or meet for drinks at a bar.”

Having been in the food industry, Diane was motivated to grow the farm-to-table movement. She joined the international organization Slow Food WISE, where she now sits on the board of the Milwaukee chapter. The mission of Slow Food WISE is to reconnect people with their food. This means knowing where it comes from and practicing both sustainability and taking pleasure in the food we eat. “In essence we are trying to bring good, clean and fair food to the most people possible,” said Diane. “We focus on having people learn where their food is coming from, supporting local farmers and bringing back cooking to their own kitchens.”

The organization also prides themselves on what they refer to as food justice, meaning working to bring healthy food options to everyone. Recently Slow Food WISE was successful in lobbying to have the amount of money allotted to food stamps increased so that people could purchase healthier food. They also focus on hosting at home cooking classes to highlight food producers and get people back to their roots of enjoying a meal at home.

The classes typically have ten people and participants are encouraged to help cook the meal. Classes are donation based and after the meal is prepared the group gets to enjoy eating it together while conversing. “Our goal is to have host home kitchens in different communities that will encourage people to return to home cooked meals. Everyday food that is nourishing, healthy, and made with high quality ingredients while also showcasing that it is affordable and delicious,” said Diane. More information on Slow Food WISE can be found by following their Facebook page.

While Diane has been busy growing the slow food movement, Nicolas has found a passion being a DJ, specifically for EDM music. Nicolas is still happily working in procurement for Saputo Cheese, but enjoys being a DJ at various clubs and bars when time allows. “I’ve always loved EDM music. For years we’ve attended Tomorrowland, which is the biggest EDM festival in Belgium,” said Nicolas. “I have a passion for fast things - from the beats of music, to Formula 1 race cars. It’s become a hobby to watch all the car races.”

A typical night at their home will be Diane cooking a meal while Nicolas is working the turn-tables to produce musical jams. They speak only in French while at home with their children, Vadim (10) and Camille (7). Their kids love life in Whitefish Bay and the ability to run to friends houses to play. Life wouldn’t be complete without their dog, Chouquette, named after a French pastry. Most nights their meal includes a cheese plate, bringing it back to their relationship roots.

SPRING is an excellent time to refocus on gastrointestinal health which is increasingly understood to be linked to overall wellness. Warm weather means more outdoor activity and encourages thoughts of gardening. Moving more and eating healthy food are just 2 ways to improve GI health. Your 30-foot long digestive tract is hard at work extracting nutrients from your diet that are then absorbed into the blood stream and carried throughout the body for use for energy, growth, and repair. Shifts in stomach acid and gas - which is linked to digestive disorders. Together, with the right food choices, these factors can help improve GI health.

The digestive system- also affect gut health. When gut health is good, damaging inflammation and lapses in immunity are less likely. While some factors affecting gut health cannot be changed such as how a body is built or family and genetic history, there are some factors each of us do have control over:

- Increase fruit and vegetable intake in any form: fresh, frozen, canned or dried. Plant foods are rich in fiber and disease fighting chemicals. Choosing whole grains also ups fiber intake.
- Get more sleep. Lack of sleep negatively effects the body by decreasing immune function and increasing the likelihood of obesity which is linked to digestive disorders.
- Manage stress. Learn relaxation techniques, practice deep breathing and have some fun!
- Get regular medical check-ups and screening tests, such as colonoscopies to diagnose problems early.
- Make good choices to help your body stay on track to wellness.

When you are suffering from depression that’s been resistant to medications or traditional therapy, Transcranial Magnetic Stimulation (TMS) may be the solution. Contact Rogers Behavioral Health to learn more.
rogersbh.org       800-767-4411

My depression wasn’t improving with therapy or medication. TMS helped me.

We live in a competitive world. The drive for success is affecting children at an increasingly early age with young people feeling pressured to achieve better grades, excel on standardized tests, and outperform their peers. All that can add up to stress and anxiety, even for high-performing students. “It’s all about balance,” says Amanda Heins, PsyD, supervising psychologist in Rogers’ OCD and Anxiety Center for adolescent residential care. “We want high achievers in the world. But it’s important when pushing yourself to succeed that you ask questions like what do I want to accomplish? What are my personal values? Why do I want this particular goal? When it comes to setting goals, oftentimes there’s a missing ingredient that unintentionally sets us up for failure.”

What are SMART goals?
Dr. Heins says goals should be SMART:

S — SPECIFIC
▷ (Clearly define what you want to achieve.)

M — MEASURABLE
▷ (Establish a way to determine if you’ve met your goal.)

A — APPEALING
▷ (Pursue a goal that interests you.)

R — REALISTIC
▷ (Make sure your goal is achievable.)

T — TIME BOUND
▷ (Ensure you have time to achieve your goal.)

“It’s important to set goals,” explains Dr. Heins. “Make sure you have a realistic time frame for achieving it. If you decide to run a marathon, you need to start by setting smaller goals of running a few miles every day. Ask yourself what are the steps to get me from the starting point to the finish line and what do I need to do to break the goal into smaller milestones? Keep tabs on your progress, and if you hit a bump, be flexible and adjust as needed. Give yourself a break when things don’t work out as planned,” she says.

Setting ambitious goals and being driven isn’t unhealthy, but for people with OCD (obsessive-compulsive disorder) and anxiety, who may also struggle with perfectionism, it’s a lot harder to manage.

Symptoms to look for are:
▶ Inability to manage day-to-day activities
▶ Spending excessive time on tasks, needing to “start over” if they aren’t perfect
▶ Frequent emotional meltdowns when unable to complete or perfect a ritual
▶ Withdrawing from things they used to enjoy doing
▶ Significant change in academic achievement

“If you notice OCD tendencies creeping in, the good news is we know how to treat that,” says Dr. Heins. “Going into treatment doesn’t mean you will no longer be a high achiever. Treatment will actually help you be more effective in what you’re passionate about.”

Rogers offers evidence-based treatment throughout Wisconsin and nationwide for kids, teens, and adults dealing with OCD and anxiety. For more information call 1-800-767-4411 for a free screening or request a screening online.

Bird City

THE WHITEFISH BAY GARDEN CLUB and the Village recognize birds are vital to maintaining a balance in our ecosystem. One of our missions is to create a healthy and sustainable environment for our birds. One way to help is by reducing the amount of plastic used in our community. According to the organization, World Migratory Bird Day, “An estimated 8.3 billion metric tons of plastic has been produced since its introduction in the 1950s. 91% of plastic is not recycled, but rather discarded as waste, accumulating in landfills and the natural environment.”

Here are a few ways you can help:

▶ Bring reusable bags to the grocery store, including produce bags for fruits and vegetables
▶ Purchase reusable silicone bags for food storage - most are freezer and dishwasher safe
▶ Don’t buy bottled water; use refillable bottles
▶ Skip the straw or carry your own reusable straws
▶ Purchase items packaged in glass or aluminum
▶ Consider a bamboo handled toothbrush
▶ Skip plastic utensils when picking up takeout
▶ Stop using balloons; try paper garland instead

Sister Act Jr.

We are excited to announce Whitefish Bay Middle School’s musical, Sister Act Jr! This show is based on the hit 1992 film and Tony-nominated Broadway musical and features original music by Alan Menken (Newsies, Beauty and the Beast, Little Shop of Horrors).

When Deloris Van Cartier, a stoppping disco diva on her way to the big time, witnesses a murder, her show biz plans are put on hold. She is placed in protective custody in a place the police are certain she won’t be found: the local convent. Disguised as a nun, Deloris finds her new rigid lifestyle a difficult adjustment, butting heads with the strict Mother Superior. Using her unique disco moves and singing talent to inspire the choir, Deloris breathes new life into the church and community. In doing so, she blows her cover. Soon, the gang is giving chase, only to find themselves up against Deloris and the power of her newly found sisterhood.

Sister Act Jr. is filled with powerful disco-inspired music, toe-tapping dance numbers, and a truly moving story which celebrates the power of friendship and the importance of community.

With the involvement of more than 150 Whitefish Bay Middle School students, two casts, and a stage crew that works to create incredible sets, this show is sure to bring energy, laughter, and entertainment! Tickets go on sale April 5th. Contact Whitefish Bay Middle School for more information.

April is when veterinarians recommend testing your dog for heartworm. Why? Because if your dog was bitten at the end of last mosquito season, they would test positive 6 months later. If you have adopted a dog last year and it was heartworm negative, it could still be positive this year because of the way the disease works. When an infected mosquito bites a dog, the larvae are deposited into the new host, enter the bloodstream, and travel to the right pulmonary artery. There they mature, mate, and begin producing new microfilariae within about 6 months. Left untreated, heartworms can multiply dramatically over time. Mature heartworms range from 6 to 14 inches in length and can live as long as 7 years in dogs. These parasites cause severe lung problems, heart failure, organ damage, and ultimately death in dogs.

Heartworm is very common in the southern half of the United States, where many dogs/puppies are being sourced for transport for adoption and Wisconsin gets thousands of dogs from areas where heartworm is endemic in the population every month. As these animals continue to come up here without an accurate heartworm status, they will increase the risk for animals here to become infected.

Please see your vet every April for heartworm testing and keep your dog on a year-round preventative to ensure that if they are bitten by an infected mosquito that the larvae will not develop into adult heartworms.

Makeup Tricks
THAT HELP YOU LOOK WELL-RESTED

Who among us wouldn’t love to look as though we got a restful eight hours of sleep each night, even if we maybe got five and tossed and turned through most of it? Coffee only gets you so far, and then comes concealer. Here are a handful of trusty makeup tricks that will help you look like you got more pillow time than you actually did.

White or nude liner
A light color in your waterline (the area between your bottom lashes and eye) will instantly make your eyes appear more open and awake. I prefer a nude eyeliner for this—since it is more natural looking—but white works, too.

Hydrating balm
When we look tired, the tendency is to pile on undereye concealer. While this does work, be careful: too much concealer and powder in that area can make the thin skin under your eyes appear crepey and dry. Try using a hydrating eye balm or brightening balm under your makeup to plump up that skin and smooth the texture. These can be found in stick form, which makes them great for gals on the go. Also, should you need to touch up throughout the day, many balms sit nicely on top of makeup.

Blush
When you’re sleep-deprived, adding color to your cheeks can do wonders! Rosy cheeks give a youthful, fresh appearance. Don’t know which color to choose? Go for something with the same undertone as your skin.

Color-Correcting concealer
If you’re sporting some dark circles, it’s tempting to grab the lightest concealer on your vanity and layer it under your eyes. But remember this: peach and yellow-toned concealers actually work to cancel out the purple and blue color, rather than just cover it up. Set with a bit of translucent powder and you’re out the door.

Light eyeshadow
But not on your lids. No, this trick involves dabbing a bit of your favorite light eyeshadow in the inner corner of your eyes (that hollow area near your tear ducts). Since this is another place that can appear dark when you haven’t gotten enough shut-eye, strategically placing a light shadow (with a bit of shimmer) to that spot creates the illusion that you’re awake and restored.

- 2 romaine lettuce leaves, washed and sliced
- 1 oz. rice vermicelli noodles
- 1/2 carrot, peeled and sliced into matchsticks
- 1/4 cucumber, sliced into matchsticks
- 1/4 cup bean sprouts
- 2 Tbsp. fresh mint
- 2 Tbsp. fresh basil
- 2 Tbsp. fresh cilantro
- 2 spring rolls (homemade is great, but frozen ones also work)
- Sliced beef, chicken or pork (see below)
- Hoisin sauce, for garnish (I like a lot of this)
- Chopped salted peanuts, for garnish
- Nuoc cham sauce, for dipping
- Sweet Lemongrass Pork
  - 1 quick-fry (thin-cut) pork chop, thinly sliced
  - 1/2 stalk lemongrass (white stem only), very thinly sliced
  - 1 clove garlic, crushed
  - 1/2 Tbsp. ginger, minced
  - 1 Tbsp. cilantro, minced
  - 2 Tbsp. soy sauce
  - 1 Tbsp. fish sauce
  - 1/2 Tbsp. honey
  - 1/2 Tbsp. brown sugar
  - Mix all ingredients and marinate pork slices overnight.

ASSEMBLY

- Cook the spring rolls according to package directions. If using homemade, heat them up in a toaster oven so they stay crispy.
- While the spring rolls cook, soak the vermicelli in hot water until the noodles are soft, (about 5 minutes). Drain, then run cold water over them. Leave them in the colander and toss them in a little neutral oil so they don’t stick.
- When the spring rolls are ready, let them cool slightly, then cut them into bite-sized pieces.
- Place half of the sliced lettuce in the bottom of a large serving bowl, then half the noodles on top. Working your way around the outside of the bowl, place half each of the bean sprouts, carrots, cilantro, cucumber, basil, spring rolls and mint.
- Just before serving, stir-fry the pork slices in a wok or skillet over medium-high until cooked through, (about 2 to 3 minutes). If you want to use the remaining marinade as a sauce, cook until it reduces by at least half to make sure it’s safe to eat. Place the pork in the bowl.
- Top with a generous drizzle of hoisin sauce and a handful of chopped peanuts. If desired, serve nuoc cham in a small bowl on the side for dipping spring rolls, or pour some over the noodles.
Spring is finally upon us, at least in a meteorological sense. As we head outdoors to begin the process of cleaning up the salt and grime from winter, we also start to prepare the outdoors for the beautiful weather ahead. For many, this is an exciting process filled with preparations for Spring and Summer celebrations and activities. But, if we are not careful, there can also be great danger.

As you begin projects this spring, take extra care to ensure you are following some key outdoor electrical safety tips:

- Always have a qualified electrician perform all electrical work. Be sure appropriate permits are filed with your local building inspector prior to work commencing.
- To prevent electrical shock, make sure all outside electrical receptacles are GFCI (ground-fault circuit interrupter) protected.
- Use lighting and power tools that are listed by a qualified test laboratory (such as UL) and make sure they are made for outdoor use.
- Store electrical tools indoors when not in use.
- Always keep electric tools away from children.
- Keep the area around your electric meter and other electrical equipment clear.
- Check lighting and extension cords for damage before using. Replace any damaged cords right away.
- Use extension cords that are listed by a qualified test laboratory and marked as approved for outdoor use.
- Only use extension cords on a temporary basis, never as permanent wiring.
- Have a professional tree cutting service trim branches that might fall on electric wiring. Always use a wooden or fiberglass ladder outside; being sure to keep the ladder at least ten feet from power lines.
- Never touch anyone or anything in contact with a downed wire. Always assume power lines are live, even if they have fallen to the ground. Stay a safe distance away and report them to emergency services right away.
- If you are performing any outdoor projects that involve digging, always call Diggers Hotline first by dialing 8-1-1 or (800)242-8511.

TO PARTICIPATE in most sporting tournaments, there is a fee associated with entering. These fees are typically a few hundred dollars per team. At the Silver Spring Neighborhood Center, located off of Silver Spring and 64th Street, they hosted a unique youth basketball tournament this past February. The entry fee was not monetary, but instead each child had to write an essay on Black History Month. The student could highlight any aspect or person from Black History Month of their choosing. This resulted in students learning more about Black History Month while also enjoying physical activity through the basketball games. In addition to the very successful basketball tournament, the SSNC offers programs for every age and every stage of life. From after school programs, to a food pantry and literacy services, these are just a few of the many things offered at the center. For more information on volunteering please visit their website at www.ssnc-milw.org.
